

How we can help

We offer people affected by cancer access to high-quality, comprehensive and appropriate information and support – for all stages of the cancer journey.

You may have cancer yourself, care for a friend or relative, work as a health professional, or simply want to know more about cancer.

The service is staffed by Macmillan Professionals, supported by trained volunteers, some of whom will have personal experience of living with cancer. We can also refer you to other support services if needed and offer guided internet access.

What do people ask?

How can I learn more about the type of cancer I have?

Who can I speak to about financial advice?

How can I help someone who has cancer?

Do you have details about local and national support groups?

I am finishing treatment – what happens now?

Did you know?

We can give you:

- confidential one-to-one support
- information about help with the cost of cancer, including financial support and advice on welfare benefits and grants
- information about free prescriptions
- information about diet, nutrition and exercise
- information for carers.

We can make sure you:

- have information and support on all aspects of living with cancer
- know about local and national support groups
- have information on meeting the cost of transport for hospital treatment
- have information about complementary therapy services.

Drop in

If you have any concerns about cancer then please drop by for a chat; you don't need to make an appointment.

We are here to help from 9am – 4pm, Monday to Friday.

If you can't visit the hospitals we have a telephone information service and can arrange to call you at home.

We rely on the support of trained volunteers and the office is occasionally unmanned. If you are making a special journey to visit the centre, please call so we can ensure someone is available.
